The New York Round Table, a literary journal, which, though avowing a neutrality in party politics, has always heretofore advocated the cause of the Republican party, contains in its issue of this week (August 29) the following significant article on the Presidential election:

If signs are to be trusted which are fast spreading exultation through the ranks of one political party and doubts and dismay through those of the other, the chances that Horatio Seymour will be the next President of the United States are steadily on the increase. Unforeseen circumstances may undoubtedly deflect or restrain the current of popular feeling, but its present direction is unmistakable. Eight State elections will be held, however, between this time and that of the great event in November, and from their results, that of the Presidential contest will probably become quite evident. Of course, should the struggle be very close in Pennsylvania and Ohio the prognostication may be less trustworthy. But there are several States which a short time since were assigned to Grant and Colfax, which even Republicans now concede to be doubtful; and should the process of mutation continue not even the vote of the Keystone or the Buckeye State would alone necessarily be decisive in the Republican behalf. Thus should its opponents lose Ohio and gain Pennsylvania, or vice versa; from calculations generally accepted at this time, the Seymour ticket will carry the day. Suppose, for example, the following—which now appears sufficiently plausible—to show the final result:

SEYMOUR.	GRANT.
Arkansas	5
California	5
Florida	3
Illinois	16
Delaware	3
Georgia	9
Indiana	13
Kentucky	11
Louisiana	7
Maine	7
Maryland	7
Massachusetts	11
Michigan	11
Minnesota	4
Missouri	7
Nebraska	3
New Hampshire	5
New Jersey	11
New York	24
North Carolina	9
Ohio	24
Rhode Island	4
South Carolina	4
Tennessee	10
Vermont	5
West Virginia	5
Wisconsin	5
Total	164
Total	213

This table omits the States of Virginia, Mississippi, Texas, and Florida.

If, on the contrary, the Republicans carry both Maine and Louisiana, or should they carry Indiana, the main result would still be unchanged.

The State elections will probably, to a considerable extent, influence each other, the floating vote always running more or less with the prevalent tide, but as the succession happens to fall, encouragement is likely to be pretty evenly distributed. Thus, the first State election—that of Vermont, September 1—will of course be a Republican success. California, on the following day, will certainly show a triumph for the Democrats, the Maine election, September 14, will be much more interesting and significant; because it cannot be counted as a foregone conclusion. The Republican majority of 27,600 in 1866 was reduced by 16,000 votes in 1867. If the process of reduction is still going on—and thus Democratic leaders sanguinely hope and strenuously claim—the Republicans may find their last year's majority of 11,600 entirely dissipated in November. After the Maine election comes a month which will doubtless witness the hardest work of the canvass. The four States of Pennsylvania, Ohio, Indiana and Iowa, hold their elections on October 13th, the same day. Iowa will, without doubt, go for the Republican ticket, but Indiana is uncertain. Mr. Hendricks' strength is very great, but he has a majority to overcome—that the last election of '66—of 14,000. On the other hand Mr. Lincoln's majority in '64 was 34,000 and it remains to be seen how far the reaction has proceeded here as well as elsewhere. As regards Ohio, opinions are naturally very much divided. The wish, in political matters so potentially father to the thought, produces decided convictions that are highly antagonistic. To the impartial observer it seems suggestive enough to perceive that the Republican majority of 60,000 in 1864, was less than 20,000 in '66, and has dwindled to 3,000 in '67. From present appearances the election in Pennsylvania will be closer than in any other State. As to New York, scarcely any but strong partisans now question that she will go for the Democratic candidates by a heavy majority.

The violence and bitterness of the Radical leaders, their want of generosity in dealing with and speaking of the South, and their curious deficiency in tact and practical statesmanship, are mainly responsible for a sweeping reaction that many wise and patriotic thinkers find reason to regret. By identifying themselves with the cause of universal negro suffrage, the Republican party have become pledged to assent or fall by a principle which it is clear the American people are not prepared to maintain. We have always believed, and in these columns have frequently expressed the belief, that this was the rock on which the Republican party would strike and shiver, and successive events have strengthened this persuasion. Whatever may be just or expedient for the future, there are at present too many voters in this country, not too few; and there are tens of thousands of intelligent men who thoroughly believe this, although they are always quite as ready as they should be to avow their convictions. Justice to the blacks is a good thing, but the nation is evidently not yet ready to assent either to the necessity or the policy of securing that justice at the cost of the liberty of the whites. The election last year in Ohio, the election we have just witnessed in Kentucky, indicate in the earnest manner the strength and determination of the popular will on this subject. A revolution is in progress which, all bloodless though it may be, promises to be resistless in extent and efficiency. The people are saying to the Radical extremists in language not to be misunderstood: "Thus far shall you go, but no farther." Freedom for all bondmen: we agree to and insist upon, but we will not agree to a precipitate and indiscriminate bestowal of the cherished privilege of American freemen upon the most ignorant and degraded of the community. We demand that you pause here until the deliberate sense of the whole community shall have been thoroughly tested and fairly expressed."

Hypocrisy always sooner or later begets bitterness, and there cannot be a doubt that, however honest and admirable the motives of many Republicans, there have been some among their most conspicuous leaders and spokesmen who have thought more of reinforcing and perpetuating the power of the party, than of assuring the welfare of the negroes. Amongst this class of men, whether politicians or journalists, there has grown up in the last year or two an intense popular hostility which has led to not a little violence of expression, and which threatens greatly to heighten the asperity of the Presidential contest. If, as is now claimed, the blacks in considerable numbers should vote the Democratic ticket, the sincerity of a certain class of Republican politicians will be put to a critical test. On the other hand, the candor of opponents of negro suffrage, who like the Round Table, have disclaimed partisan animus as influencing their opposition, will be tried in a corresponding way. To this, it may be added, we have not the smallest possible objection. We should disbelieve in and protest against present universal negro suffrage just as unreservedly did every colored man in the South vote the Democratic ticket, as we have disbelieved and protested when it has been generally credited that the negro vote would be cast en bloc for the Republicans. We have no faith that good ends in public any more than in private affairs can be attained through illogical, passionate and wrongful means, and we shall be much mistaken if the sturdy common sense of the people does not show in the coming election that they cherish a similar incredulity.

AN EDITOR ASSAULTED.—Mr. Geo. W. Ranck, editor of the Lexington Observer, was assaulted at Shelbyville, by C. M. Harwood, Esq., a lawyer of that place, and chairman of the Democratic County Committee. The cause of the difficulty was an article that appeared in the Observer, written by Mr. R., entitled "Why We Love the Old Louisville Jail," in which he detailed the circumstances of his arrest by the military.

Mr. Ranck was standing near the hotel, conversing with the Rev. C. K. Marsalis, when, Mr. Harwood approaching, said, "Good morning, Mr. Ranck." To this salutation Mr. R. paid no attention, continuing the conversation with his friend as if regardless of the presence of the other. Mr. H. then asked Mr. R. if he wrote the article referred to, and if he alluded to him in it, to which Mr. R. replied, "I certainly did, sir." Mr. H. then said something in regard to the article, that it was wholly false, or something of that kind, when Mr. R. replied, "Very well, then, we will settle the matter as gentlemen usually do, and at some other time." Mr. H. then, as I was informed, struck Mr. R. with a cane; the latter ward off the force of the blow and stepped into a store near by, seized a stick, with which he struck Mr. H. over the head, when they were separated.

Mr. R. says he was unarmed, it is not his custom to carry weapons, and had no intention that Mr. H. felt aggrieved at the article or would demand satisfaction.

Mr. Ranck in his paper says he did the very best he could under the circumstances, and thinks he will not fail to do the same in future, that he holds himself responsible for his paper, and ready to settle in that mode and way prescribed and adopted by gentlemen.—Ex.

Ensign Stebbings Redivivus.

We had no idea that the pasquinade of years ago, that caused the town to laugh, in which Stebbings was the embodiment of the military idea of the time, that upheld Scott on the one side and Pierce on the other, would ever be so nearly revived as a verity. But we copy the Stebbings platform and see how nearly it accords with the Grant platform of the day. It is from the Stebbings official organ—the Carpet Bag of 1852—after the nomination at Sagus in that year:

"Platform adopted by the National Convention at Sagus, which nominated Ensign Stebbings for President.

Art. 1. The Constitution of the United States is that which constitutes.

2. The Army and Navy constitutes us a free people therefore,

3. The Army and Navy are the Constitution.

4. The President swears to support the Constitution, that is the Army and Navy; therefore, the President ought to be a military man.

5. Ensign Jehiel Stebbings is a military man; it follows that he ought to be and must be President.

6. Extensive patronage is a power to be used only for a wise purpose; to do this, requires a wise man; Ensign Stebbings is a wise man; therefore he ought to wield extensive patronage—in other words, he must be President.

7. It is of no use to oppose the irresistible. All other candidates should of course, withdraw from the contest.

8. Governments are maintained by rewards and punishments; our government ought to be maintained; therefore Ensign Stebbings will reward his friends and punish his enemies.

9. Republicanism ought to be propagated all over the world, peacefully, if we can, at the sword's point, if we must.

10. Ensign Stebbings must be elected.

As we compare this burlesque platform with the practice and promise of the Grant party of to-day, it assumes almost the form of prophecy and Ensign Stebbings rises from his mythical obscurity and becomes a real presence. Stebbings, it will be remembered, was no speaker. Another significant resemblance between then and now is found in the fact that at the Sagus convention it was "Resolved that we will go it blind for Ensign Stebbings."

Why are the Irish Democrats?

Because the Republican party is the party that puts "none but Americans on guard."

Because they got enough of bad government—had enough of military despotism on the Green Isle.

Because they don't think that party friendly to them which calls them "Irish cattle."

Because they hate sumptuary, tyranny and unconstitutional laws.

Because they object to being reduced to the social and political level of an inferior race.

Because an Irishman don't see the justice of a poor man paying one cent taxes on every bunch of matches with which he lights his fire, while a rich bondholder rolls in wealth and pays no tax on his bonds.

Because Democrats have always been their friends, and a true son of Erin never deserts.

These are a few of the reasons why the Irish are Democrats.

NEW DICTIONARY.—Some Eastern school-book publishers are understood to be preparing a new dictionary, with the latest definitions. A few examples will suffice to show what the language is coming to:

"Peace.—A standing army to enforce disarmament upon tax payers while non-tax paying negroes do the voting and governing."

"Impartial Suffrage.—One basis of suffrage in the North, but another basis in the South."

"Money.—For the working man, the mechanic, and the plowholder, treasury notes; for the bondholder, gold and silver coins."

"Economy.—Five hundred millions a year for federal expenses."

"Liberty.—Admitting negroes to the elective franchise."

"Equality.—The result of depriving 'white men of the right to vote.'"

"Balance of Power.—Enabling three millions of negroes to wield greater political power than eighteen millions of white men."—Chicago Times.

The Danville Advocate says Messrs. Tawney & Brewer sold 49 head of aged mules, mostly broken, at an average of $160. Lyle & Hall, of Lexington, purchasers. P. T. Gentry sold his premium mules—3 head—at $300 each, and one at $250. Mr. Hudson, of Jefferson county, purchaser.

A Touching Scene in A Justice's Court.

Mr. D. G. Gibbon, student of medicine, was called up before one of our Randolph street Justices yesterday, on a disorderly conduct warrant, sworn out by Miss Susan Neil. The complainant was a very pretty girl. She blushed, hid her face, and stated that she was forced to take the present step only by the obstinacy of the prisoner. These two had been engaged, and many gifts and notes had passed between them. One day, for the merest nothing, he had picked a quarrel, broken the match and her heart, and yet refused to return the seven love-letters, the old glove, the curl and ribbon she had given him. She supposed he kept them and showed them to his wicked associates and boasted of them as trophies of his conquest of a fond and girlish heart.

His Honor looked gloomily at Mr. Gibbon—there was a Bridewell in his eye.

Mr. Gibbon replied that he greatly preferred attending an amputation at the hip joint to felling in love with a woman. A fellow had any felling of security about it; it might be different, but there never was any telling where one was to fetch up. He had tried romantic young ladies, and literary young ladies, and had come to grief in every instance. Finally he had settled on Miss Susan, who was described to him to be a matter of fact, biscuit-baking young woman. He had paid her his addresses, making little gifts of saleratus and blueing, and receiving in return some ginger-cakes. She was not to be led too deeply into sentiment. If he spoke of poetry, she spoke of pastry. If he talked of radiant hopes, she spoke of washing-soap. A few days ago he went to see her, and found her preserving. Something in the looks of the paper which was put over the cans struck him, and he looked and found she had used his love-letters for that purpose. That seemed a little too cool, and he spoke to her of it. She replied that it was a nice idea of hers. All those beginning "Dear Susan" went over the peaches, and all those beginning "My own love" over the apples. She wished he would write one more of the latter, in order to make the number she wanted. He felt such a woman would never do for him, and he broke off the match. As for returning the letters, it was out of the question. The words of love they contained were a part of himself. When he saw them it brought the old days back—the melodies of the youth of their love, heard before the roses had withered, and before he ceased giving her saleratus.

During these remarks the Court wiped its eyes, took from its pocket a square handkerchief, a small dictionary, some blank forms, an almanac, and at last, a small tin box, which looked as if it might at some time have held Seidlitz powders. This box the Court opened, and took out a little parcel tied up in red tape, on which it dropped a tear and then said:

"Twenty-four years ago, this Court loved a girl living near Downard's Grove. This Court corresponded with that girl by the weekly stage. In a moment of frenzy that girl jilted this Court, and demanded her letters and a string of beads. This Court replied that it could not return the beads, which it had traded at a grocery store, and that it would not return the letters, when entreated by a brother to give them up. This Court, to the great laceration of its feelings, knocked down that brother and stamped upon him. It still retains those letters, though she who wrote them has emigrated to Missouri. Now this Court does not intend to stultify itself by taking any action against the defendant, who will be discharged. As for the complainant, she will be fined $10, which sum this Court would assess on the person who jilted it, if it could get hold of her."—Chicago Tribune, Aug. 16.

Aunt Sarah, about seventy years of age, is unanimous on man. She says: "If all the men were taken off, she'd make arrangements for her funeral forthwith." She also says: "Suppose all the men were in one country, and all the women in another, with a big river between them, goodgracious, what lots of poor women would be drowned!"

THE SOUTH.
BY FATHER R. A. RYAN.
Yes, give me the land,
Where the ruins are spread,
And the living tread light
On the hearts of the dead;
Yes, give me the land
That is blest by the dust,
And bright with the deeds
Of the down trodden just.
Yes, give me the land
Where the battle's red blast
Has flashed on the future
The form of the past;
Yes, give me the land
That hath legends and lays,
That tell of the memories
Of long vanished days.
Yes, give me the land
That has story and song,
To tell of the strife
Of the right with the wrong.
Yes, give me the land
And with a grave in each spot,
And names on the graves
That shall not be forgot.
Yes, give me the land!
Of the wreck and the tomb,
There's grandeur in graves—
There's glory in gloom;
For out of the gloom
Future brightness is born,
As after the night,
Looms the sunrise of morn.
And the graves of the dead
With the grass overgrown,
May yet form the footstool
Of Liberty's throne;
And each simple wreck
In the way-path of might Shall yet be a rock
In the Temple of Right.
The Secret of Long Life.
One of the most sensible sayings on the art of longevity, so far as it can be considered attainable, was that given by an Italian in his 116th year.
Being asked the secret of his living so long, he replied, with that improv-visation for which his countrymen are noted:
"When hungry of the best I eat,
And dry and warm I keep my feet,
I screen my head from sun and rain,
And let few cares perplex my brain."
A writer observes that the last line contains the quintessence of the best advice that can be given on the subject. The deadliest foe to longevity is excitement. Every man is born with a certain stock of vitality, but which can not be increased, but which may be husbanded or expended rapidly, as he deems best. With certain limits he has his choice to live fast or slow, to live extensively or extensively, to draw his life amount of life over a large space, or to condense it into a narrow one; but when his stock at length becomes exhausted, he has no more. He who lives extensively, who avoids all stimulants, takes light exercise, never overtaxes himself, indulges in no exhaustive passions, leads his mind and heart on no exciting material, has no debilitating pleasures, lets nothing ruffle his temper, keeps his accounts with God and man daily squared up, is sure, barring accidents, to spin out his life to the longest limit which it is possible to attain;
while he who lives intensely—feeds on high seasoned food, whether matterial or mental, fatigues his body or brain by hard labor, exposes to inflammatory diseases, seeks continual excitement, gives loose reins to his passions, frets at every trouble, and enjoys little repose—is burning the candle at both ends, and is sure to shorten his days.
An exchange says: "We were compelled to refuse an offer of job printing the other day from a man way back, who innocently called to get some postage stamps printed. He was quite disappointed because we could not do the work; he "wanted 'em real bad to put on a letter he writ to a gal, and it cost too much to buy 'em of the post-office feller."
A certain lawyer had his portrait taken in his favorite attitude;
standing with his hands in his pocket.
His friends and clients went to see it, and everybody exclaimed,
"Oh how like it's the very picture of him." An old farmer, however, dissented. "Don't you see," said he,
"he has his hands in his own pockets. 'Twould be as like again
if he had them in somebody else's."
A medical student under examination, who was asked the different effects of heat and cold, replied:
"Heat expands and cold contracts."
"Quite right, can you give me an example?"
"Yes sir; in summer, which is hot,
the days are longer; but in winter,
which is cold, the days are shorter."

dler and Harness line.
Repairing done promptly, with neatness, and in a workmanlike manner.
The public generally are invited to call
and examine our stock, as we are satisfied
that we shall be able to render general satisfaction.

Mrs. L. Bents,
H. A. would call the attention of the citizens of Harrison to our large and well assorted stock of Groceries, Hardware of all kinds, Wooden-ware, Stone-ware, Castings, Nails, Glass, Paints, Oils, and a large assortment of Iron, the best Family Flour, always on hand at the lowest rates, and innumerable other things too tedious to mention. We will always be on hand at the old stand formerly occupied by F. A. EVELETH, where we will take great pleasure in waiting on all those who may favor us with a call Jan30-tf MEGEE & EVELETH.
Something New. Come and See.
J. AND A. FENNELL,
Has just opened in Cason & Garrett's old stand on Main street, one door below Shaw-han's drug store, a Saddle & Harness Establishment where we will be pleased to see our old and new friends, who may need work in our line. We keep constantly on hand a good supply of SADDLES, Harness, Ridles, Collars, and everything in the Saddler and Harness line.
Repairing done promptly, with neat-
ness, and in a workmanlike manner.
The public generally are invited to call
and examine our stock, as we are satisfied
that we shall be able to render general satis-
